Budget woes plague high school sports

► Additional support costs to be passed on to schools — and then possibly parents ► More than 9,500 students registered to play at least one sport last year ► Increased classroom pressures could see fewer teachers volunteer to coach

JEREMY NOLAIS
@METRONEWS.CA

High school athletics in Calgary could face their biggest funding crunch in at least four decades this fall, says the executive director of the governing association.

As the Calgary Board of Education continues to measure ways to cover a projected budget shortfall of nearly $62 million for the upcoming school year, the Calgary Senior High School Athletic Association has already reined in support funding to schools for things like transportation and equipment costs.

"I'm waiting to see what next year's going to be like," said executive director Tom Parker. "I kind of have a feeling from the meetings I have gone to it's going to be worse than it was this year."

The association's budget is based on the number of student athletes that register. Parker said it was a granted a small increase for next year — per-athlete funding will rise to $9.75 from $9.20 — but it's not enough to cover rising costs for officials, fuel and facility rentals.

Pat Coyle, parent and coach of the football team at St. Timothy High School — which is located in Cochrane but competes in Calgary — said he has noticed a "gradual" increase in athletic fees over the past few years.

"I guess parents will have to look at the aspect of cutting back in one way or another," he said.

For Parker, depriving some kids of athletics represents the worst-case scenario.

"You learn things like teamwork, self-control ... most of them are lifelong-type skills," he said. "There are more kids registered for athletics than any other extra-curricular program."

Economic uncertainty

► Decline: Tom Parker with the Calgary Senior High School Athletic Association said economic uncertainty has also led to a noticeable decline in donations from the community.

► Cost: At least half of the officials enlisted by the association have hiked their per-game cost by a dollar. Parker said more than 500 matches were played in volleyball alone this year.

► Funds: In the face of dwindling funds, the CBE also faced the cut of 324 teaching and support-staff positions. Dozens of positions were kept after money was found in the board's reserve to maintain some positions.

► Cuts: The Calgary Catholic School Board had to cut 92 positions late last month.

MINIMUM LIVING

JEREMY NOLAIS

Since my girlfriend, Kelsey, and I began living on minimum wage, conversations about money have become a necessary — albeit sometimes awkward — part of our daily routine. “The biggest challenge for most couples is that (money) isn’t talked about until it’s a problem,” says Brenda Duncan, a Calgary relationship counsellor of 32 years.

She advises partners with little expendable cash to set out a personal budget that each person can spend as they see fit.

“It’s allowing each of you a little flexibility, free of judgment, within whatever financial limitations you have,” she said.

Typically, once Kelsey and I have covered bills, food and gas, we are left with $80 per week. If we contribute half of that to our meagre emergency fund, the remaining $40 can be split up for use as “fun money.” Maybe I decide to knock back a brewski after a tough day at work and Kelsey opts to go for a cheap bite with a buddy; the point is that what little money we have to splurge on can go a long way toward maintaining a degree of independence — not to mention sanity. This week we explore such topics as bar-hopping on a budget and adding a little variety to the brown-bag lunch.

Former landfill employee says city should do more

One of the city’s landfills will undergo a small cleanup in the coming months, but a former employee says more should be done.

Vertical wells have already been drilled in Stage 1 of Spyhill Landfill — the oldest area of the landfill that dates back to the late 1960s.

Over the next few months, the city will look to extract vapours from the soil as well as removing a small portion of Stage 1 that could contain solvents and oils.

However, after years of combing through city reports, former landfill engineer John McKay believes Stage 1 is a health hazard.

“They should yank out all that hazardous waste area,” said McKay, who was fired from the landfill in 2006.

After five years of research, Dave Griffiths, the city’s director of waste and recycling services, said the department is confident it is taking the right steps.

“We’re not basing our conclusions on a light look at this — it’s incredibly expensive and exhaustive work,” he said.

McKay said the city should have begun cleanup years ago.

Firefighters save duckling from sewer

QUACK. A duckling in distress had northwest Calgary firefighters in action Saturday afternoon.

Firefighters were summoned to the intersection of Brisebois Drive and Brentwood Grove NW to discover what officials estimated was a two- to three-day-old duckling that had fallen through the street-side sewer grate.

With an anxious mom overseeing things, firefighters were able to rescue the baby duck and reunite it with its family. The fire department says these types of calls are normal this time of year.

Transportation Safety Board spokesman John Cottreau says the four-seater Mooney M-20 was on its way from Vernon, B.C., to Killam, Alta., when it was reported missing late Friday night.

RCMP say it took four hours of searching rural roads early Saturday morning near Bashaw to find the wreckage, which was located in a farmer's field.

Sgt. Geoff Buxcey says searchers eventually found the plane by following a burning smell.

The names of the two victims have not been released.

Car-free Calgary a hit with cyclists at festival

KATIE TURNER
@METRONews.ca

Cyclists were given the chance to bike on roads free of cars yesterday during the Calgary Bike Festival and Ride the Road tour.

Dozens took part in the police-escorted trip from Stanley Park into downtown.

"It's a lot of fun and it gives you a sense of what it would be like to ride in a community where bicycles are considered equal to cars," said one of the organizers, Robert Fewster. He added that bike commuting can be difficult in Calgary because the infrastructure is not conducive to cycling.

"We really like multi-use pathways but when we're commuting, we really need road access and road access is currently dangerous."

Brian Keating, head of Conservation Outreach at the Calgary Zoo, knows first-hand the dangers of being a bicycle commuter.

"I'm a big fan of bicycle helmets," said Keating of a 2008 accident he was in. "Mine broke in about 40 places."

Cycling strategy

David Swann, leader of the Alberta Liberals, was on hand at the event.

► Swann encouraged cyclists to contact their aldermen about the importance of cyclist infrastructure.

► The city is currently working on a cycling strategy, to be released this month.

Alberta woman dead after bus collision

► Greyhound driver and another person seriously injured ► Head-on crash sent bus into a ditch on impact

A head-on collision between a Greyhound bus and a car in southeast B.C. early Saturday left one person dead and two seriously injured.

The female driver of the car died instantly in the crash, which occurred on Highway 3 between Fernie and Sparwood, RCMP Cpl. Annie Linteau said. The 34-year-old woman's identity was being withheld until her family could be notified, but Linteau said she was from Cowley, Alta.

The bus driver and one passenger were taken to hospital with serious injuries.

Six passengers were on the bus, which was bound for Creston, B.C., from Calgary, Greyhound spokeswoman Maureen Richmond said, adding everyone on board was taken to hospital as a precaution.

Passenger Troy Dimopoulos said the bus driver was jammed into the wreckage of the Greyhound.

"We thought he was going to die so we were trying to talk to him and comfort him," he said.

The driver remains in hospital in serious condition. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Does it matter who keeps our city parks safe and clean?

It does if you spend your summer there.

A clean, safe park — families count on it. And CUPE staff work hard to make sure Calgary parks are their best all summer long.

So why would City Council privatize park maintenance? Especially strange since they've experimented with it before, and it failed. Private contractors weren't able to do all the work — so it was just left undone. The results: poorly maintained parks and no taxpayer savings. And city workers had to redo the work.

It just doesn't make sense to repeat the same mistake. City staff do a better job than private contractors — and when nobody has to make a profit, it costs taxpayers less.

Our kids deserve healthy, safe, green and clean parks this summer — not parks going to weed.

For well-maintained parks and green spaces at a lower cost — keep it public.

U of C scientists open door to antimatter mystery

A tiny crack in the door to an alternate universe has been wedged open a bit wider.

University of Calgary scientists along with their international counterparts have announced a major breakthrough in their ability to capture and store minuscule particles of antimatter, the mysterious substance described as a mirror image of everyday reality. It lies at the heart of the most fundamental questions in physics.

"I call this a game-changer," said Makoto Fujiwara, a University of Calgary scientist and the lead author of a paper published in the journal Nature Physics.

"The antimatter world is some sort of mirror world," he said. "We're really peeking. There's so many things thought of as science fiction that we can seriously consider scientifically studying them. We're really excited about this."

Fujiwara and 40 other physicists from eight countries working at the Switzerland-based European Organization for Nuclear Research, or CERN, say they have been able to hold on to atoms of antihydrogen — the antimatter counterpart to regular hydrogen — and do so for nearly 6,000 times longer than the previous record.

The team, which includes researchers from five Canadian universities and research institutions, has also been able to catch eight times as much antihydrogen as before.

"It will really provide us with an opportunity to measure different properties of antimatter very precisely," Fujiwara said. "You can think of a lot of studies that were not even imaginable before."

Physicists believe that when the universe was created about 14-billion years ago, as postulated in the big bang theory, matter and antimatter were created in equal amounts. But the universe now contains almost no trace of antimatter and scientists want to know what happened to it all.

20 die in border clash

► Death toll includes a woman and teenage boy, while 325 were wounded ► Hospital officials identify casualties

Israeli troops yesterday battled hundreds of pro-Palestinian protesters who tried to burst across Syria's frontier with the Golan Heights, killing a reported 20 people and wounding scores more in the second outbreak of violence in the border area in less than a month.

The clashes, marking the anniversary of the Arab defeat in the 1967 Mideast war, drew Israeli accusations that Syria was orchestrating the violence to shift attention away from a bloody crackdown on opposition protests at home. The marchers, who had organized on Facebook, passed by Syrian and UN outposts on their way to the front lines.

"The Syrian government is trying to create a provocation," said Israel's chief military spokesman, Brig-Gen. Yoav Mordechai. "This border has been quiet for decades, but only now with all the unrest in Syrian towns is there an attempt to draw attention to the border."

There was no Syrian comment on why protesters were allowed to storm the border, apparently undisturbed by authorities. Syria's state-run media portrayed the event as a spontaneous uprising of Palestinian youths from a nearby refugee camp.

► Partygoers gather in Hamburg, Germany, on Friday after a teenage girl, identified only as Thessa, forgot to mark her birthday invitation as private on Facebook.

Facebook invite attracts thousands

- Birthday girl mistakenly posted invitation for all to see
- Some brought presents, others brought cake

Better check your Facebook settings before posting a party invitation online.

A teenage girl in Germany who forgot to mark her birthday invitation as private on Facebook fled her own party when more than 1,500 guests showed up and around 100 police officers, some on horses, were needed to keep the crowd under control.

Eleven people were temporarily detained, one police officer was injured, dozens of girls wearing flip-flops cut their feet on broken glass and firefighters had to extinguish two small fires at the 16th birthday party in Hamburg, police spokesman Mirko Streiber said yesterday.

Some 15,000 people confirmed online they would come to the party without even knowing the girl, weekly paper Bild am Sonntag reported.

The birthday girl, identified only as Thessa, went into hiding, Streiber said, but "nonetheless the party was a hit."

Thessa had initially only wanted to ask some friends over to her home. Her parents made their daughter cancel the party, informed police and hired a private security service to protect their home.

Despite public announcements in Hamburg that the party had been cancelled, teenagers and young adults showed up on the street in front of Thessa's home.

Novel drugs offer skin cancer patients new hope

► Two studies find extended survival for those with deadly melanoma

They're not cures, but two novel drugs produced unprecedented gains in survival in separate studies of people with melanoma, the deadliest form of skin cancer, doctors reported yesterday.

In one study, an experimental drug showed so much benefit so quickly in people with advanced disease that those getting a comparison drug were allowed to switch after just a few months.

The drug, vemurafenib, targets a gene mutation found in about half of all melanomas. The drug is being developed by Genentech, part of Swiss-based Roche, and Plexxikon Inc., part of the Daiichi Sankyo Group of Japan.

The second study tested Bristol-Myers Squibb Co.'s Yervoy, a just-approved medicine for newly diagnosed melanoma patients, and found it nearly doubled the number who survived at least three years.

"Melanoma has just seen a renaissance of new agents," and more are being tested, said Dr. Allen Lichter, chief executive of the American Society of Clinical Oncology. The studies were published online by the New England Journal of Medicine.

Report claims feds hoarding copyrights

► In 2009, more than 2,100 patents and copyrights by outside contracts held by government departments

Departments and agencies are hoarding hundreds of patents and copyrights, violating the federal government's rules on intellectual property, says a new report.

For more than 10 years, federal policy has been to assign contractors the rights to any intellectual property produced during their work for departments and agencies. For example, a software company that writes a computer program under a federal contract can retain the copyright and sell the program. The

Protocol

- It says Canadian rules are being widely ignored.
- It also criticized the Treasury Board and Industry Canada for failing to monitor departments' adherence to the policy.

policy, implemented in 2000, says only in exceptional circumstances should Ottawa retain a patent or copyright — largely because the private sector is best positioned to exploit it commercially.

A new report found that too many patents and other intellectual properties are winding up in government hands. In 2009, 59 per cent of the intellectual property generated by outside contracts was snapped up by government departments.

Flaherty set to revisit budget

In a way, it will go down as the ultimate budget leak.

When Finance Minister Jim Flaherty stands up in the House of Commons today to deliver the government's fiscal plan for the upcoming year, Canadians could be forgiven for thinking they've heard it before.

They have. As Flaherty has repeatedly said since his party won its first majority on May 2, he intends to bring back essentially the same document he unveiled two months ago and that all three opposition parties rejected.

Taking what remains of the drama out of the process, Flaherty has also unveiled the two major changes he does intend to bring in — setting aside about $2.2 billion for Quebec's adoption of the harmonized sales tax, and beginning the process of phasing out political party financing.

"Basically this is the March 22 budget with a couple of additions from the platform," the minister said recently. Officials have also let it be known there will be few surprises, if any, reducing the usual all-day lock-up for reporters to a slim two hours.

Move over, Oxford, there's a new school in town

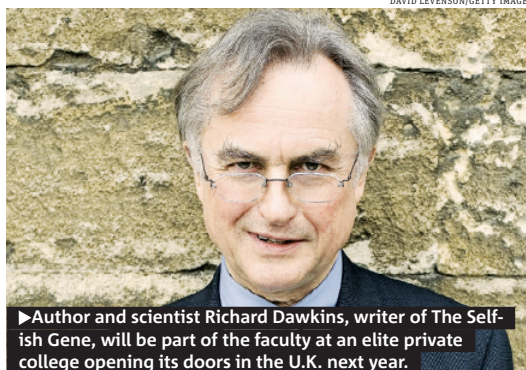

A group of prominent British academics said yesterday they are starting a private university in London to rival the country's elite institutions in Oxford and Cambridge.

The New College of the Humanities will be led by AC Grayling, a renowned philosophy professor, and the faculty will include Richard Dawkins, an evolutionary biologist and successful author, economics professor and writer Niall Ferguson, and other prominent educators.

It will be a relatively small university boasting at least one teacher for every 10 students and offering one-to-one tutorials and extensive contact between teachers and students, officials said.

In a message posted yesterday on the new university's website, Grayling said graduates would be ready to make "an imme-

HOW'S THE WEATHER OUT THERE?

HIGH PLAINS DRIFTER

JAMES CALLSEN
METRO CALGARY

The weather in Calgary is a major pre-occupation.

We're either complaining about it, raving about it, dreading it, looking forward to it, wishing it would go away or wishing it would come back. I don't know if I have gone a single day in my existence as a Calgarian where I haven't had a conversation with someone about the weather.

The weather is rarely spoken about in positive terms. Flip open your Facebook or Twitter feed any given day and you will find someone complaining about what it's like outside. It usually has something to do with rapid temperature changes, moisture or the wind. All of it has to do with the extreme unpredictability of living so close to the Rocky Mountains.

Weather complainers bug me. It's one thing to get a little annoyed after four straight days of rain or a week of blizzard conditions, but it's quite another to be constantly moaning about the state of the forecast, no matter what it is."

The first group is easy to understand. Yes, I know it's 15 degrees in Vancouver. Yes, I know 20 is chilly for a southern Ontario summer. Yes, it really can snow in June here.

The second is more frustrating as these people seem to be plagued with a horrible memory, forgetting torrential

May/June downpours and April blizzards that happen every single year.

Imagine how boring life would be if our weather was the same all the time. What if we were reasonably cold in the winter and mildly hot in the summer? First of all, forget all the great in-between clothes you get to own (vests, light sweaters, capris and the multitude of hats).

Then forget making easy small talk with a stranger in an elevator (instead of, "That's a cold old wind out there, eh?" It would go along the lines of, "Wow, that Stephen Harper sure is a jerk, eh? You voted for him? Oh.")

Besides, if there wasn't lousy weather to blame our even lousier mood on, we would be forced to confront our own personal issues — and what kind of fun is that?

So the next time you complain because it's rainy today, snowy tomorrow and 25 by the weekend, think of the alternatives. They might not be quite as pleasant as you think.

NEWS WORTH SHARING

This year's focus was biomechanics. For five months, the boys worked determinedly on their creation: Medi Bot, a mock-up design of a knee brace that prevents tissue tears. Beating out 42 teams, Robo Medi Squad won a trophy and $1,000, which it plans to give to community educational programs in Calgary.

WEIRD NEWS

Now they are taking the shirt off his back

Thousands of buyers vied for items that once belonged to convicted swindler Bernard Madoff, with 14 pairs of his underwear going for $200 US and a photograph of a naked rear end selling for $4,600.

The Miami Herald reported the U.S. Marshals Service held the auction Saturday in Miami Beach.

Some bidders, like Mike Burd of Long Island, N.Y., planned to resell the goods for profit on eBay.

Others, like North Miami online retailer Rich Kroll, simply wanted a piece of history.

The mostly household goods brought in more than $400,000, which will go toward compensating victims of Madoff's $65-billion Ponzi scheme. Madoff pleaded guilty and is serving a 150-year prison sentence.

Who's afraid of the big bad wolf?

METRO WORLD NEWS IN HOLLYWOOD

Scene in brief

Studio estimates yesterday pegged X-Men: First Class at a solid No. 1 opening with a $56 million US weekend. But the prequel chronicling the formative years of the comic-book mutants found smaller audiences than the franchise's first four big-screen adventures.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Who sought J.R.? Dallas star Larry Hagman's memorabilia auctioned off in Beverly Hills. Scan code for story.

There's just something about Tyler Posey that makes people think of werewolves. Not only is he leading MTV's new, darker series version of Teen Wolf, but 19-year-old California native was also considered for the role of shape-changing Jacob Black in the Twilight films — a role that eventually went to Taylor Lautner.

"I guess, according to MTV, I have a lupine look, which I had no idea what that meant. Does anyone know what that means?" Posey asks, before being given the definition. "Wolf-like? I had no idea what that meant. But yeah, I have a 'lupine' look." Which is not to say Posey is a particularly hirsute young man. "I shaved 18 days ago," he jokes. "I grow no hair. I just look like a wolf. Dark and handsome."

In fact, if he could take on any of his werewolf alter-ego's abilities, it wouldn't be the increased speed, strength or senses, he admits. "I'd like to grow hair. On my face," he says. "My werewolf grows big, crazy muttonchops. But he grows it and then it just goes away. That's the power I want. I can just grow whatever I want and bring it in whenever I want. Why not?"

Posey is quick to point out this Teen Wolf doesn't have a lot in common with the original film — which came out before Posey and most of its target audience were born — including how his character looks during a full moon.

"The big movie I really looked at for inspiration was Wolf with Jack Nicholson, because it's totally our genre," he says. "It's funny, there's romance in it, and his wolf looks a lot more like ours. It's more smooth and ... was it sexy? I don't want to call Jack Nicholson sexy. But he is."

While other actors might be canceling their Internet service to avoid reading scathing message board rants — which Teen Wolf was generating long before its premiere — Posey refuses to hide.

"I like hearing reviews, I like hearing what people have to say," he says. "I want to keep track of the show, see what people think. Nothing deters me. If people say bad reviews, it's just like, I like the show. That's what matters, right?"

Besides, Posey knows he has supporters, since he interacts with them as much as possible. "I'm Twittering like crazy," he says. "I'm pretty good with trying to stay in contact with my fans. Like, every single person that talks to me I try to message back. That's one of my favourite things about Twitter, just being so personal with your fans. I think it's so cool. I don't know, I just like it. I feel like I can change the world. And I'm going to, damn it, one tweet at a time."

With a polished third disc ready for release and some prestigious recent gigs behind him, Dallas Green appears poised for an international breakthrough.

But the artist known as City and Colour doesn't want his fans to worry. The troubled troubadour isn't in danger of cheering up anytime soon.

"I'm still the same old guy I've always been," Green said during a recent interview in Toronto. "I still write songs about how I

"And maybe that's better, because no matter how many times I play at (Toronto's) Massey Hall or Royal Albert Hall (in London), or how many records (I sell) whatever, I still think I can do better and still want to be better, more so for myself than anyone else.

"Having those big experiences just makes me like recess back further into the hole that I'm in that makes me want to get better."

Yet that last comment does not mean that Green, with an ever-growing contingent of fans waiting on his music, is shying away from personal material.

In fact, on Green's third solo disc, Little Hell — out Tuesday — the 30-year-old includes enough critically intimate details of his life to make an oversharing reality TV star blush.

He delves into his wife's nightmares, into the way he relates to his parents, into fleeting moments of relationship-related despair and into the mental-health struggles endured by his sister.

He says writing about his innermost feelings is not new for him, but he continues to strive for universality even in his most personal pieces.

"When I write songs like that ... I guess I think I write them in a relatable enough way that anyone who's been through something with someone they love, you can easily listen to that song and just replace the word 'sister' with brother, mother, father, or uncle, aunt, anything."

Illness forces Adele to cancel tour dates

British singer Adele has cancelled the remaining dates on her North American tour because of her laryngitis.

In a statement Friday, Adele said she was "really frustrated" but "there is absolutely nothing I can do but take the doctor's advice and rest some more."

The announcement came days after the singer postponed five dates on the tour. She is now cancelling the nine remaining shows.

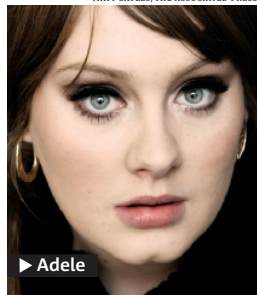

The 23-year-old's sophomore album, 21, is the bestselling album of the year. It has sold close to two million units in America.

Her single, Rolling In the Deep, is currently No. 1 on Billboard's Hot 100 charts.

The statement also said that rescheduling the tour dates was "being investigated."

Platinum plus?

- ▶ Each of Green's previous two independently released solo projects (2005's Sometimes and 2008's Bring Me Your Love) were certified platinum in Canada.
- ▶ Some have already made the not-so-bold prediction that Green could build on those returns with his third effort, which is set for release on Tuesday.
- ▶ London's Independent newspaper, for instance, mused in its recent four-star review of his live performance that Little Hell was "likely to provide his true coming-of-age."

- ▶ But Green says he doesn't take such praise to heart. "You get to the point where you start believing the hype and you lose that buffer zone where you can tell if something that you wrote is (bad) or not," he said. "Because if everyone likes it, then you think, Oh geez, I can do no wrong."

Arcade film not intended as political statement: Band

PATRICK SEMANSKY/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Arcade Fire has long held a reputation for seriousness, whether it's the Montreal band's carefully contemplated music, their politics or their unwaveringly independent ethos.

So it's perhaps not surprising that the stark images in the band's new Spike Jonze-directed short film Scenes from the Suburbs — in which shadowy military characters at one point execute a civilian on a pristine suburban street — are being interpreted as a statement on the military, or U.S. border security, or the suburbs themselves.

But really, the band's Will Butler says they were just having fun making a short film influenced by the sci-fi adventure movies they grew up watching.

"No, I think it starts with the genre, like: 'Let's make a dystopian movie,'" Butler corrected.

"It wasn't like: 'The world is going to hell, and this is the hell we'll be in in 25 years.' It was more like, let's make a sci-fi movie. Oh, what's a plausible path that this could take?"

"But really, we want some guys with guns in the future."

▶ Members of Arcade Fire perform at the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival in May.

Indeed, Scenes from the Suburbs — which is screening at the CFC Worldwide Short Films Festival this week in Toronto and will then be included as part of a deluxe version of the Montreal band's third album The Suburbs on August 2 — is a sci-fi puzzler that seems to blend the paranoia of Terry Gilliam films with the nostalgia of classic Steven Spielberg flicks.

The nearly 30-minute film fills in some of the gaps in the shorter version of the music video for The Suburbs. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ciao, Cameron: Rodriguez back to his first love

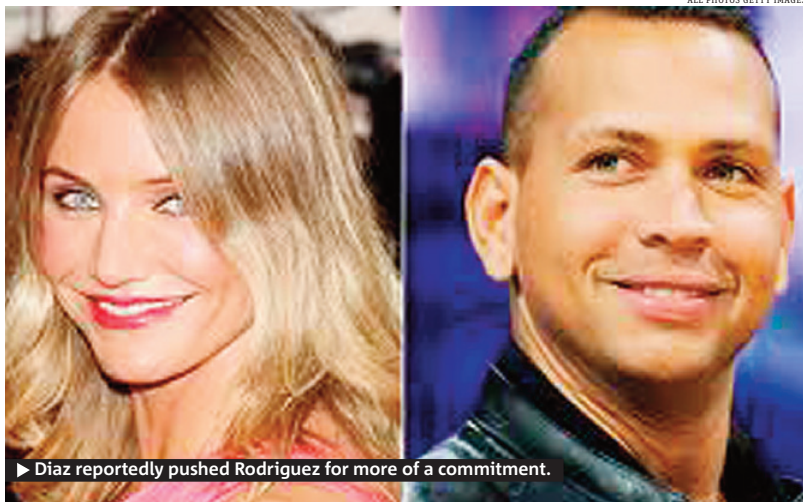

► Alex Rodriguez dumps Cameron Diaz ► Says he 'needs to focus on baseball' ► Sources say Diaz went overboard trying to please him

Cameron Diaz and Alex Rodriguez have called it quits, according to Perez Hilton, and Diaz is reportedly none too thrilled about it.

"They've broken up," a source says. "[Cameron is] hurt and betrayed, because she tried so hard to please him. She went overboard."

And according to Page Six, Rodriguez was the one who instigated the split, telling Diaz "that he needs to focus on baseball and that's all there is to it," according to a source.

"He thought she would be an easy girlfriend. But then she pushed for more of a commitment, and he told her to cool it." ● METRO Sean Penn and Scarlett Johansson have reportedly broken up after only a few months of dating, according to People magazine.

There was no reason given for the split, as reps for both stars refused to comment.

Some began speculat-

► "Education in online spaces is absolutely crucial for younger people," says Zack Whittaker, a criminologist and blogger for iGeneration.

Kids on Facebook?

► Mark Zuckerberg recently said, if he could, he'd open up the site to children under 13 ► Zack Whittaker, a criminologist and blogger for iGeneration, weighs in on the controversy

You wrote that you're against children on Facebook. Why is that site different from MySpace or MSN messenger, where kids can befriend random screen names?

Well, as Facebook draws in over 500 million users worldwide, it is natural for the site to attract the most attention. While other sites should not bask in the heat Facebook feels with pressure from privacy advocacy groups, there is no difference between a seemingly random screen name on MSN/Windows Live and using a fake name on Facebook. Identity goes further than simply the name we use or details we hand over.

As a criminologist, what do you feel is the most effective way to stop predators? Or to catch them?

This insidious relationship we have with online predatory behaviour is ubiquitous across sites involving children. Online sex offenders should be restricted from using social networks, but this simply prevents online reoffending. The balance should be maintained between children's access to offenders as well as offenders' access to children. A bipartite arrangement should be enforced, with children of a certain age — say 13 and upwards, as Facebook has as its current policy — are allowed on social networking sites, but with a restricted panel of privacy settings to prevent automatic disclosure of a child's information.

But how do we institute laws without violating privacy?
It is an immensely difficult balance to strike. Unfortunately, it is only for criminologists and sociologists to debate, and for respective parliaments, assemblies, congresses and legislators alike to implement. Privacy should be the foremost point for the minds of those constructing laws. If freedom of expression and speech can align with privacy — something the United States holds better than its British cousins — then we are at least one step in the right direction.

Should there be stricter guidelines for opening up a social media account?

Yes, in that it would prevent spam accounts from being created — formed from fake names that water down the concentrated social experience for the rest of users. Equally no, in that the less information there is about users online, the less chance that social media companies can misuse private user information, as Facebook has shown to do before.

Save dollars, make sense

► From using efficient appliances to building rooftop gardens, there are simple ways to live a green life

BEN KNIGHT
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

A home is the largest — and often oldest — possession many Canadians own. The world is changing rapidly, and even a house as young as 50 years old was built in a time where building methods and future priorities were very different than they are now.

As a result, home renovation is booming across the country. And — like any other growth industries — green, eco-friendly projects are more popular than ever.

"There's always an energy-efficiency step you can take," says Steven Price, senior director for conservation, science and practice with WWF-Canada. "The best thing to do is get an energy audit. They're not very expensive, and if you want to target your money for best value, an energy audit will help you figure out the best place to go."

Price recently renovated his 100-year-old semi-detached home. He says the Internet is filled with useful information, big-box retailers offer lots of green advice, and the money you invest will absolutely hold its value.

"In most cases, if you have the capital to invest in home insulation or more efficient appliances, it will pay back in the long run. On energy, that will be increasingly true as prices go up in the future. It's harder to justify the gray-water tanks and the cisterns from a price point alone. But they will become more and more affordable with time — as water becomes the new oil, in terms of its preciousness."

Price also saved money by recycling old ceiling beams and discarded bricks into a beautiful bar top, and an eye-catching renovated fireplace.

"Everything old is new again," he says, "but we're doing it with modern approaches."

Another inspired idea is greening your roof — literally.

"We made a garden on a flat roof — about the size of an apartment balcony. We're able to grow mint and spices, and have a sitting chair. That's pretty nice."

Every bit helps, Price concludes, and it's a way an entire city can become less ecologically disruptive.

"When you think of flat garage roofs — if the building is strong enough — and all the flat roof space downtown, we could do a lot to make our cities cooler ... in both senses of the word."

Giving unto others while globe-trotting

► Voluntourism can be great for the resumé, and even better for the weary worker's soul

DREW HINSHAW
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

There's no place like home, but when five unemployed folks jostle for every dismal opening, home may have no place for you — which is why job counselors suggest the quick trick to make your career take flight could be a stint volunteering on a faraway shore.

A trip spent archiving artifacts or replanting rainforests can help both the un- and un-happily employed rediscover their calling, says sabbatical coach Clive Prout.

"If you're unhappy with your current career, then use a sabbatical as a way to get out of it," he offers.

"If you leave the country, you get a sense of the things we take for granted, particularly what we use as measures of success."

Voluntourism, Doug Cutchins, author of Volunteer Vacations, says can also be a way to test-drive a new vocation, like eco-management or development economics.

But it doesn't have to just be a break from your career, he adds — it can be a break for your career.

"Volunteer vacations could be a short-term way to get some training, maybe learn another language, and pick up skills," he says. "Really smart employers will not care so much whether you've been paid, just whether you've shown dedication, creativity, and hard work."

► Start out with a spot you've been aching to see, then check if there's a way you can help out in the area.

PUT IT ON THE RESUMÉ

Details like time spent laboring in an exotic locale can make your resumé leap from the stack, Cutchins says — and hopefully not off the table.

The trick to leveraging a volunteer vacation into acceptable resumé material, he says is to "just focus on the skills that you gained or honed."

"It's easier to make your resumé stand out if you've taken time off to do things that you believe are going to make a difference," Prout concurs.

Then, when the interview hour arrives, "Talk about how those particular experiences are relative to the job," Cutchins adds.

The Money Question

It may seem odd but volunteering costs money, more often than not:

But it need not cost a lot, Cutchins claims.

"Staying domestically certainly costs a lot less than going internationally," he says. Staying for a while, he adds, reduces it further.

And others are willing to waive it outright.

"There's not an insignificant list of organizations that are free or nearly free," Cutchins says.

When he first came to Toronto from Malaysia with his wife and young family, Royson was told "You have a degree — so what?"

He pumped gas, repaired clocks and worked at Future Shop. Within three months Royson moved into management and eight years later found himself being courted by Sammy Chiu of Samtack Inc. to take his company public.

After Royson's arrival in the corner office, Samtack's revenue soared from 20 million a year to over 400 million worldwide. Today 97 per cent of all Samtack employees are new immigrants.

"I tell them, 'You think you were very good where you came from? Well, forget it, burn the bridge and move on.' Giving money is one thing but I believe that you should also give a Giving back to the community and to his adopted country. That's what makes Royson Ng a Canadian success story.

Tisdale, Dixon audition to replace all-star corners

JEFF MCINTOSH/THE CANADIAN PRESS

► Geoff Tisdale makes a catch during the Stamps' first training-camp session in Calgary yesterday.

► Loss of Browner and Anderson creates opportunity to step up

The departure of two all-star cornerbacks from the Calgary Stampeders opened a door for Geoff Tisdale and Johnnie Dixon.

Tisdale, a free-agent signing on the off-season, and Dixon, a spare for Calgary most of last season, have the inside line on replacing Brandon Browner and Dwight Anderson, otherwise known as "B.B." and "D.A."

"We've been given an opportunity to go out and prove we're among the top defensive backs just like Browner and D.A.," Tisdale said yesterday on the first day of training camp. "We're just going to go out there and try and do that."

"It's something we both really want. We wouldn't spend three to six months in the off-season putting in all that work to not come here and want it. I want this pretty bad."

Browner, a CFL all-star for the past three years, signed with the NFL's Seattle Seahawks in the off-season. At six-foot-three and 210 pounds with a wing-span like a wandering albatross, Browner is a fearsome sight for opposing receivers.

Anderson is a nimble, physical defender who had five interceptions for two touchdowns and compiled 49 tackles in 2010. He joined Browner on the all-star team and then signed with Montreal as a free agent.

So there are two backfield vacancies to fill that seem large due to the level of departing talent.

Dixon, at 21, was the youngest player on Calgary's roster last season. An interception in each of Calgary's two pre-season games, including one for a touchdown, kept him on the team after training camp. Dixon toiled on Calgary's practice roster until October when he was activated to play halfback for three of Calgary's last five regular-season games.

Dixon is wearing Browner's No. 27 this season after calling the former Stampeder and asking if he could.

"Just knowing I'm taking D.A.'s spot and B.B.'s number is a big thing for me, but I think I can handle it," said the Belle Glade, Fla., native.

Tisdale, a 26-year-old Pittsburgh State product, spent the past three seasons playing halfback and cornerback for Hamilton. He had a team-leading four interceptions and eight pass knockdowns and led all defensive backs in tackles with 58 last season.

► Rafael Nadal returns the ball to Roger Federer yesterday.

Nadal bests Federer in French final

► Spanish star matches Bjorn Borg with his sixth French Open win

Regardless of the setting or the surface, Rafael Nadal confounds Roger Federer the way no other man can.

Put the two greats of the game on opposite ends of a court in a Grand Slam final — particularly at Roland Garros, on the red clay that Nadal rules — and the one-sided nature of the rivalry grows even more pronounced.

Grinding along the baseline, using every inch of his wingspan to extend points, whipping fearsome forehands this way and that, Nadal flummoxed Federer yet again yesterday in a riveting highlight-filled match, beating him 7-5, 7-6 (3), 5-7, 6-1 for a record-tying sixth French Open championship and 10th major title overall.

“He plays better against the better ones, and that’s what he showed today,” said Federer, owner of 16 Grand Slam trophies. “He’s a great champion, on clay, especially.”

There’s no question that Nadal is as good as it gets in Paris — 45-1 for his career, and the same number of titles there as Bjorn Borg — but the Spaniard already also has shown that he is much more than the King of Clay. And yesterday’s victory will only raise more questions about whether Federer truly deserves to be called the Greatest of All Time if he is not even the Greatest of Right Now.

“I was able to play my best when I needed my best. For that reason, today I am here with the trophy.”

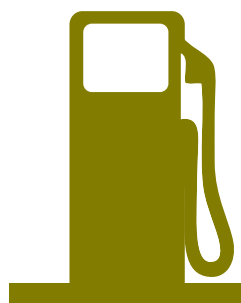

RAFAEL NADAL

Nadal leads their head-to-head series 17-8. That includes a 6-2 advantage in Grand Slam finals and a 5-0 edge at the French Open (in the 2005 semifinals, and the 2006, 2007, 2008 and 2011 finals).

When a reporter recited those numbers and asked for an assessment, Nadal replied: “Well, it means I can play well, too.”

“When you talk about these statistics, when you try and make these comparisons, really it’s not very interesting to me,” continued Nadal, who would have ceded the No. 1 ranking to Novak Djokovic with a loss yesterday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thrashers GM won’t make the trip north

Rick Dudley won’t be part of the NHL’s return to Winnipeg.

True North Sports and Entertainment confirmed yesterday that it will not retain Dudley’s services as general manager when the Atlanta Thrashers relocate to the Manitoba capital next season.

The company purchased the Thrashers this week and has already met its goal of selling 13,000 season tickets.

► Rick Dudley

Dudley, who was named the Thrashers’ GM in April 2010, had four years remaining on his contract.

“After meeting with Rick Dudley this week, we have decided to go in another direction with the position of general manager of our team,” True North chairman Mark Chipman said in a release. “We informed Rick of our decision late (Saturday) afternoon, and thanked him for his work in building a foundation and future for this team.”

Craig Heisinger, the general manager of the American Hockey League’s Manitoba Moose, is expected to be a key piece of the NHL club’s front office. When the sale of the team was announced, Chipman said Heisinger would play a “significant role.” Chicago Blackhawks assistant general manager Kevin Cheveldayoff has also been linked to the club.

True North did not say who will be in attendance on the team’s behalf at the NHL’s GM meetings in Boston on Wednesday.

Bruins sticking to their game plan

After making the long trip home yesterday, the Boston Bruins didn’t walk off the plane with a long list of changes or adjustments planned.

Instead, their strategy for getting back into the Stanley Cup final against the Vancouver Canucks was to stick with what got them here. Facing a virtual must-win Game 3 tonight, the Bruins were looking to embrace the energy of playing on home ice — they’re 7-3 at TD Garden during this post-season — while continuing to ride Zdeno Chara and Tim Thomas.

Those two men were both beaten by Alex Burrows before he brought a quick end to overtime in Game 2. Thomas was caught out of his goal as Burrows outraced Chara to score on a wraparound, but the Bruins goalie scoffed at the notion he might want to tone down his aggressive style.

“I have a pretty good idea of how to play goalie,” Thomas said yesterday. “I’m not going to be taking suggestions or advice at this time. I’m just going to keep playing the way I have.”

There was more than a hint of defiance from the Eastern Conference champions, who clearly feel unlucky to be trailing the series 2-0 after a pair of one-goal losses.

Coach Claude Julien came to the defence of both Thomas and Chara, the towering six-foot-nine defenceman who had a tough outing in Game 2. The Bruins captain is averaging more than 28 minutes per game in the playoffs and shouldn’t expect to see that workload eased any.

“Where we are right now, we have to look at it this way: He’s got all summer long to rest,” said Julien. “Now is not the time to start giving him a rest. We’re in a fight here for a Stanley Cup.”

“He’s capable of taking it.”

Julien hinted at needing to make a few small “corrections” before the puck is dropped for Game 3. THE CANADIAN PRESS

M, The night you told me you've never loved anyone the way you loved her, that she was the one that got away, if you only knew how much that mirrors how I feel about you. It crushed me to hear it, but I swallowed the pain and pretended not to care. Just as I pretended to move on, but I could never move on from you. I love you so much and I'm working on getting us back to that happy place we once were. You're my blessing, my miracle. I can only hope that one day you'll see in me what I see in you.
